Mr. M. Jackson
New York, N. Y.

My dear Jackson:

Your friendly and ever welcome letter reached me some days ago; in it you said that my previous note was an agreeable surprise to you and I am going to try and give you a similar sensation by writing you without so much delay as is customary with me.

With your last letter was a money-order for Seven ($7.00) dollars for which I want to thank you.

Now, Jackson as to your kind offer as to funds or anything else that I may need when I am leaving here next May wish to say that I am just as much obliged to you as though I had taken advantage of it and I want to assure you that I appreciate it thoroughly but it seems to me that you and your co-workers have done more than your share for me; there are others more under obligation to look after the little things that I will need and if they do not do so no great harm will be done. I have gotten along for the past ten years without so many things that I am easily satisfied. Again my thanks for your generous offer. What I want most is to meet you in person.

I trust all goes well with you and yours. We are fine and dandy.
With kind personal regards, I am as always,
Fraternally and sincerely
